Official Information Request

Our Ref: OIA 2025-0140

I refer to your Official Information Act 1982 (OIA) request received on 30 October 2025:

"I'm reaching out about the 'disability representation' data from the 2025 Public Service Census. Are there any planned next steps regarding this data?

Specifically, we're interested to know if there are plans to act on the findings or how the information will be used going forward. (For example, like the 2023 deep-dive on disability after the 2021 census.) If there are any plans or next steps that can be shared at this time, we'd like to help spread the word about those plans with the disability community."

Our response

With the release of the Te Taunaki Public Service Census (the Census) data on 8 July 2025, each agency received a report about their specific results. These agency summary reports are available at this link: Summary reports and technical information - Te Kawa Mataaho Public Service Commission.

On page 22 of each of these reports, is data about the experiences of disabled public servants within that specific agency (note very small agencies will have limited reporting due to privacy rules). Te Kawa Mataaho Public Service Commission (the Commission) required all departments and departmental agencies to use the findings from the Census to identify areas for improvement and actions that they will take to address the gaps identified.

Information being released

The Commission's data team have provided a more in-depth look at the Census data for the disabled workforce – preparing further reports for public servants who identify as disabled, public servants with a mental health condition and neurodiverse public servants.

These reports were produced for the relevant public service cross-agency employee led networks at the end of August 2025 and are enclosed and listed in the table below:

Item	Date	Document Description	Decision
1	2025	REPORT – Public servants who identify as disabled	Released in full
2	2025	REPORT – Public servants with a mental health condition	Released in full
3	2025	REPORT – Neurodiverse public servants	Released in full

Across the Public Service, we know that disabled public servants face ongoing challenges and inequities. We work with agencies to support the disabled workforce in the Public Service through agency Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) plans (if they have them); DEI communities of practice (each quarter) and employee-led networks. The Commission continues to support Whaikaha | Ministry for Disabled People (Whaikaha), the Ministry of Social Development, and We Enable Us (the cross-agency employee-led network for disabled people in the Public Service), through key actions in the Disability Four-Point Plan to embed opportunities for tāngata whaikaha Māori and disabled people in the Public Service.

You may like to contact Whaikaha for more information as they work across government, businesses, and communities to improve outcomes for disabled communities and lead the Disability Four-Point Plan programme of work. Whaikaha can be contacted via contact@whaikaha.govt.nz.

If you wish to discuss this decision with us, please feel free to contact Enquiries@publicservice.govt.nz.

You have the right to seek an investigation and review by the Ombudsman of this decision. Information about how to make a complaint is available at www.ombudsman.parliament.nz or freephone 0800 802 602.

Please note that we intend to publish this letter (with your personal details removed) and enclosed documents on the Commission's website.

Yours sincerely

Nicky Dirks

Exploring your results

	Take time to understand your report. Consider your response rate to determine how representative your results are of the views of your colleagues.
No data?	Depending on the size of the group this report is about, some data may be missing. This is because either there are no responses or they have been withheld to protect confidentiality.
2021/25	Some questions were also asked in 2021 – if the identifier used to create this report was also collected in 2021, slides will include this comparison.
	Most questions in this report have information about the proportion of colleagues responding positively, neutrally or negatively.
	Identify the areas where you are performing well. These will tend to be high results which are notably above any comparative results. Celebrate these results.
	Identify areas that need improvement. These will be the lower results, and/or those which are scoring notably below your comparators.
	Generally a difference of $-/+$ 5 percentage points is worthy of attention, but the size of the group is important. Changes in small groups can be unreliable. A result that appears as 0% or blank may either represent a true 0% result, or a situation where a small count means the result has been suppressed to protect employee privacy.

Exploring your results

	Take time to understand your report. Consider your response rate to determine how representative your results are of the views of your colleagues.
No data?	Depending on the size of the group this report is about, some data may be missing. This is because either there are no responses or they have been withheld to protect confidentiality.
2021/25	Some questions were also asked in 2021 – if the identifier used to create this report was also collected in 2021, slides will include this comparison.
	Most questions in this report have information about the proportion of colleagues responding positively, neutrally or negatively.
	Identify the areas where you are performing well. These will tend to be high results which are notably above any comparative results. Celebrate these results.
	Identify areas that need improvement. These will be the lower results, and/or those which are scoring notably below your comparators.
	Generally a difference of $-/+ 5$ percentage points is worthy of attention, but the size of the group is important. Changes in small groups can be unreliable. A result that appears as 0% or blank may either represent a true 0% result, or a situation where a small count means the result has been suppressed to protect employee privacy.

Self-reported Mental Health

Disability

* These questions were asked of those who either identified as being disabled, or chose prefer not to answer or don't know to that question and said yes to having either a neurodivergent or mental health condition. This was 17.1% of staff.

These results likely underestimate the prevalence of disability in the workforce.
